California Writers Club
San Francisco Peninsula
Branch

The California Writers Club was founded in 1909 by Jack London and his friends and is one of the oldest writers clubs in the nation. Over 2,100 authors have become members in 21 branches throughout the State and we stay connected with our sister branches through our State Board, regional NorCal meetings, Literary Review magazine and The Bulletin, plus retreats, conferences, and summer picnics.

To become a member, simply follow the instructions listed at www.cwc-peninsula.org/signup/

Active members have been published in print, electronic and/or online formats. Associate members have not (yet) been published.

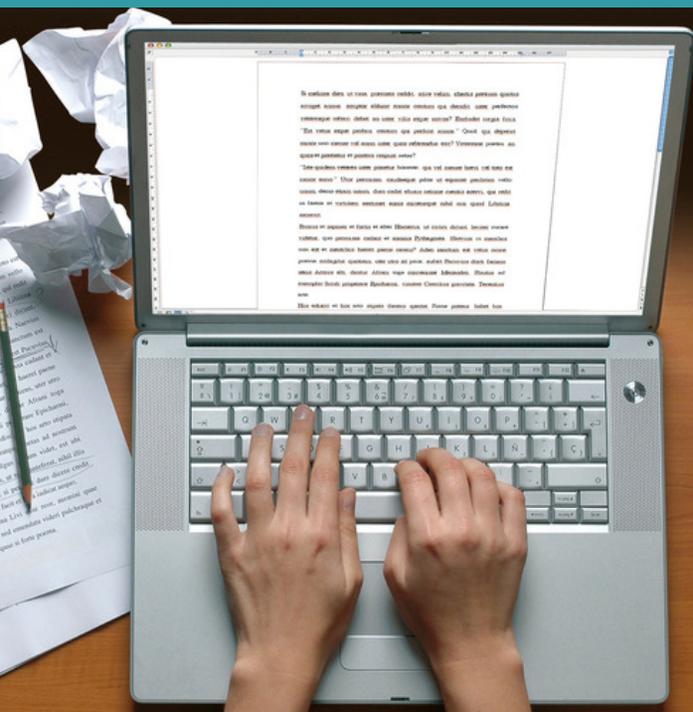

We're open to every writing discipline: fiction, non-fiction, poetry, novel, short stories, memoir, plays, screenplays, articles, and blogs.

Chartered in 1966

WRITERS HELPING WRITERS

Overcome the isolation of writing and unleash the power of community by becoming an active member of the California Writers Club. All types of writing are welcome and all levels, from beginner to published professional.

MEMBERSHIP WITH BENEFITS

JOIN US!

Develop Your Craft

Attend our meetings to hear our monthly speakers: publishers, editors, agents, marketing gurus, and other writers discuss the art of writing and the how-tos of becoming published.

Share Your Talents

Enter contests, attend workshops, join critique groups, participate in Open Mic readings and get published. Contribute your writing acumen to the Fault Zone, our annual Peninsula branch anthology of short fiction, memoir and poetry.

Get involved at the San Mateo County Fair - in a week of literary and creative programs on stage - through 25+ writing contests and through getting published in the annual anthology, Carry the Light.

PERSONAL CONNECTIONS

We set aside time at each meeting for members to network, to find others working on similar genres, and to share leads or personal experiences.

Our members regularly form critique groups to help each other work on specific pieces. Join an existing group or form a new one.

Come One! Come All!

Our monthly meetings are held at the Sequoia Yacht Club, at 441 Seaport Court, Redwood City, CA. 94063, halfway between San Francisco and Silicon Valley.
